Western wildfires: An army of firefighters, helped by higher humidity and diminishing winds, gained partial control over a wildfire that burned 14 homes and forced evacuations of hundreds of others in Carson City, Nev.

"I think it's done its worst, I really think it " said the fire incident commander. Marty Scheuerman, "Now we can do our

In California, meanwhile, a 10,000-acre wildfire forced 200 teenagers from two juvenile probation camps early Friday and continued to threaten rural hamlets on the edge of the Angeles National Forest. That blaze was 40 percent contained.

Police beating suit: A suspected car thief has filed a $25 million claim with the city of Los Angeles over a videotaped police beating he contends left him with brain damage. Stanley Miller alleged the June 23 beating also caused "spinal injuries, trunk-torso injuries, internal injuries, emotional distress, and bruises and contusions." If the city rejects the claim filed Thursday, Miller could seek damages through a lawsuit. Michael Jackson case: An appeal by news media wanting access to court information in the Michael Jackson child molestation case went unheard for a week because a clerk refused to place it on the court docket, according to court papers. Attorney Dominic Lanza, who filed the first appeal notice last week, said he checked five days later to make sure the matter was scheduled to be heard by Superi-or Court Judge Rodney Melville but was told by the appellate clerk it was not filed.

Lanza said it took until Thursday to get a clarification from the presiding justice of the California Second District Court of Appeal, who instructed the clerk that the notice of appeal should be filed

The measure empowering the Food and Drug Administration to oversee the sale, marketing and manufacturing of cigarettes was linked on the Senate floor Thursday to a $12 billion buyout of tobacco farmers.

Bird flu warning: Countries facing bird flu outbreaks should not kill wild birds in their efforts to keep the disease from spreading, the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization said Friday.

"Killing wild birds will not help to prevent or control avian influenza outbreaks? Juan Lubroth of the FAO Animal Health Service said. "Wild birds are an important element of the ecosystem and should not be destroyed.

The FAO apparently was responding to Thailand's plan to selectively cull wild storks suspected of carrying the disease.

Russia's chemical weapons: Russia will not meet a 2007 deadline to destroy some 8,000 tons of chemical weapons, due to a lack of funds, the chairman of the Russian Federation Council's defense committee said Friday.

The Interfax-Military news agency quoted lawmaker Viktor Ozerov as saying the lack of federal funds would prevent new facilities for destroying weapons from being built and could result in dangerous chemicals leaking into the environment.

Madrid bombings: An Italian court has set a hearing on July 30 to rule on the extradition of a suspected mastermind of the Madrid, Spain, train bombings, a prosecutor in Milan said Friday.

The suspect, Rabei Osman Ahmed of Egypt, is held in Milan. He was arrested here on June 7 on an international warrant issued by Spanish authorities. Madrid is seeking his extradition.

If the court approves the extradition and no appeal is made, the request passes to the Justice Ministry for final approval, said rosecutor Donatella Grieco.

Earlier this week, the Milan prosecutors' office formally approved the extradition request.

BAGHDAD — The Philippines withdrew 11 soldiers from Iraq on Friday to meet the demands of kidnappers holding a truck driver hostage, ignoring warnings from the United States that the move sends the wrong signal to terror-

The decision to pull out the head of the humanitarian mission and 10 other soldiers outraged Philippine President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo's allies in the war on terror, who fear that bargaining for the life of Angelo dela Cruz will set a dangerous precedent for the troops and citizens of other coalition members.

American troops and their Iraqi allies in the capital, Baghdad continued to face attacks. Insurgents detonated a car bomb targeting a U.S. military convoy in Baghdad, wounding one U.S. soldier and four civilians, the American command and Iraqi police said

Also Friday, attackers fired machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades at an Iraqi police patrol, killing one and wounding another, police officer Ammar Naji said.

The troubles came amid warnings by interim Prime Minister Ivad Allawi that insurgents would hit harder in the coming weeks. ### U.S. deaths in Iraq

The Associated Press

As of Thursday, 885 U.S. servicemembers have died since the beginning of military operations in Iraq in March 2003, according to the Defense Department. Of those, 653 died as a re-sult of hostile action and 232 died of nonhostile causes.

The British military has reported 59 deaths; Italy, 18; Spain, eight; Bulgaria and Poland, six each; Ukraine, four; Slovakia, three; Thailand, two; Denmark, El Salvador, Estonia Hungary, Latvia and the Netherlands have reported one death

Since May 1, 2003, when Pres-ident Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 747 U.S. servicemem-bers have died — 544 as a result of hostile action and 203 of nonhostile causes.

Insurgents also have kid-napped dozens of outsiders in hopes of pressuring countries tak-ing part in the U.S.-led coalition to withdraw. The strategy also appears intended to further isolate the United States, which already provides the bulk of the 160,000-member multinational force in Iraq.

Other coalition members, such as Australian Prime Minister John Howard, called the decision a mistake.

Pentagon creates new office to deal with prisoner abuse reports

BY SANDRA JONTZ Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. - Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld signed an order Friday creating the Office of Detainee Affairs, a Pentagon-level office to deal primarily with the International Committee of Red Cross and their reports of alleged prisoner

"The key element here will be the relationship with the International Red Cross," said Ryan Henry, principal deputy undersecretary of defense for Policy.

The ICRC reportedly has filed many reports of prisoner abuse and currently is accusing the Defense Department and CIA of hiding detainees.

"We want to have a system that can elevate their concerns to keep policymakers as respon-sively [sic] as possible," Henry told Pentagon reporters. The office will be the "single focal point" in talks between the ICRC and the Pentagon.

Who will head the new office and who will make up the committee looking into the reports has yet to be determined, he said, but the office will fall under the Undersecretary for Policy, Doug Feith. The office's creation also is an attempt to renain relations with the international committee, which intercedes on U.S. servicemembers' behalf if they are taken prisoner.

The department "appreciates the work by the International Red Cross," Henry said.

"Not only do they help us understand how we can do a better job, but they do a very critical job in protecting our soldiers."

Reports from the ICRC will now be "brought from the field" to the centralized Pentagon office, Henry said.

"In the past, they've been left at the field level, but now they will be forwarded up" to be reviewed by a joint committee, make up of members from the policy office, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and service departments.

Idaho GIs told to use 'themes' with media

pride for being on active duty, eagerness to work with coalition forces and appreciation for family and employers.

"Those themes are the things we feel are consistent with what we're doing. Those are the mes sages we want out there right now," said Capt. Monte Hibbert, who wrote the article.

Hibbert spoke by telephone from Fort Bliss, Texas, where he is training with 2,000 other Idaho guard members for a one-year tour in Iraq beginning this fall.

The 116th started deploying soldiers to Texas in early June, and there was heavy coverage of soldiers and their families in Idaho newspapers and television.

Hibbert said he did not intend to restrict soldiers' comments to

But Charles Sheehan-Miles, director of the Washington-based Veterans for Common Sense, said that's not the message that will be perceived by most rank-and-file

"I suspect it's going to be received with a good deal of cynicism," he said, because the military is increasingly "trying to control the message, because the leaders and the Pentagon have taken a lot of hits on the war."

Val Limburg, a journalism ethics and law professor emeritus at Washington State University. said it would be unethical if soldiers were being asked to cover up something that was wrong. He said the approved themes were more of a public relations issue.

Still, Limburg wondered if the military was returning to an era when it avoided uncontrolled media contacts

"In World War Two, we had a War Department and everything was cleared by the government before it went out as news. And the press went along with that because they wanted to win the war. too," he said.

During the Cold War and as recently as the 1991 Gulf War, contact between rank-and-file service members and the media was generally taboo. Military personnel were instructed to avoid talking to news reporters and to report all contacts to their local public affairs officer.

But Hibbert says the attitude has changed over time, particularly in the last decade and as news technology has changed and reporters have become "embedded" with particular units.

Because of the increased contact, even the lowest privates now receive training on dealing with the media.

"We actually try to give them some experience by simulating interviews and role-playing," Hibbert said.

U.S. drops cowardice charges

GI who sought help for panic attacks cleared

The Associated Press

DENVER - The military has decided not to pursue charges against a U.S. soldier accused of cowardice after he sought help for panic attacks

After Staff Sgt. Georg-Andreas Pogany asked for counseling in Iraq, his commanders sent him home to Fort Carson to face a court-martial on a cowardice charge, which can be punishable by death. The Army later replaced it with the lesser dereliction-of-duty charge, which could have put Pogany behind bars for six months

On Thursday, Pogany and military officials confirmed the case is finished

Sgt. 1st Class Blake Waltman, a public affairs officer with the Army's Special Operations Com-mand at Fort Bragg, N.C., said charges have been dropped because the military has learned Pogany "may have a medical problem that requires care and treatment '

Pogany, 32, had been the first U.S. soldier since Vietnam to be charged with cowardice.

A five-year veteran, Pogany said his problems surfaced after he saw the mangled body of an Iraqi man cut in half by American gunfire.

Pogany said he has physical and psychological problems that stem from brain damage caused by a reaction to the anti-malaria drug Lariam. He is part of a military study looking into com-plaints from U.S. troops exposed to drugs and chemicals.

Pogany, assigned to a Green Beret interrogation team with the 10th Special Forces Group, began vomiting after seeing the Iraqi ci-vilian's body three days after being sent to Iraq.

Pogany said he hopes to retire from the Army soon.

Army looking to recruit from Air Force and Navy

BY LISA BURGESS

ARLINGTON, Va. — With 30,000 billets to fill in the next two years and missions in Iraq and Afghanistan to man for the foreseeable future, the Army is hoping to entice sailors and airmen to switch uniforms.

The Army's new "Operation Blue to Green" program is designed to attract members of the Air Force and Navy, which unlike the Army are trying to shave the size of their respective forces.

The Army began working on the program about four months ago, and a few finishing touches remain before the program is launched, according to Brig. Gen. Sean Byrne, the Army's Director of Military Personnel Policy.

But the Army already has posted an advertisement for Blue to Green on its Web site, www.goarmy.com, as was first reported by U.S. News & World Report.

Meanwhile, over the next 14 months, Army recruiters will go to Navy and Air Force bases to talk to servicemembers who might be eligible for the transfer program, Byrne said in a Friday roundtable discussion with Pentagon reporters.

"We are going to actively recruit these [servicemembers], with the full concurrence and support" of the Navy and Air Force, Byrne said. Such servicemembers are attractive to the Army because "It's a population that has already served and been successful in their career." he said.

The new program is particularly focused on sailors and airmen in grades E-1 to E-5, Byrne said, as well as "some junior officers with the skills we need."

Selectees will undergo a four-week version of boot camp that the Army is calling the "War-rior Transition Course," to be held at Fort Knox, Ky., Byrne

The Warrior course will replace the normal nine-week boot camp the Army uses to train individuals with prior experience from other services who move into the Army.

The goal is to ensure that "there's no break in service" for those who are selected for the program, Byrne said – including ensuring that servicemembers receive a continuous paycheck and no interruptions to medical and other benefits.

The Army is looking in particular for enlisted personnel whose Rvme said.

Army personnel specialists have found 120 AFSCs that translate directly into 37 Army MOSs. Army MOS categories are broader than the Air Force's, Byrne explained. The Navy has 112 ratings that translate directly into 42 Army MOSs, Byrne said. Servicemembers whose AFSC or rate transfer directly into an MOS will receive any enlistment bonus that the Army currently offers for that skill, Byrne said. The Army will also consider accepting airmen and sailors whose specialty does not directly convert to the Army MOS, but who are willing to reclassify and learn a new skill the Army needs, Byrne said. Airmen and sailors who are re-classifying will also receive any bonus that is available for their new MOS, Byrne said.

Those servicemembers will naturally require additional skills training once they graduate from the Warrior course, Byrne said.

the Warrior course, Byrne said.

Bonuses aren't guaranteed for servicemembers who sign up for Blue to Green

But such stipends are relatively plentiful in the Army — 190 out of the Army's 345 MOSs have a signing bonus, Byrne said. For MOSs that offer bonuses, the average stipend for a three-year enlistment is $4,200, while the average bonus for a six-year hitch is $8,300, Byrne said.

U.S. Navy expands its early-out plan

BY SANDRA JONTZ Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. — Navy officials anticipate between 400 and 600 sailors will use the service's Early Transition Program, which lets eligible sailors separate up to 12 months earlier than planned.

The program has been changed since being introduced last year, and will let sailors separate a year early, rather than six months.

About 560 sailors took advantage of the program last year, said Lt. jg. Kyle Raines, a spokesman for Navy Personnel Command.

"We want all of our good sailors to stick around and stay Navy ... and this is really designed for those who have jobs or educational opportunities lined up, and we're giving them the opportunity to fill those personal goals a year earlier," Raines said.

The program is not available to sailors under a selective re-enlistment bonus or in a rating that is SRB eligible, or in who are SEALs (Sea, Air and Land), explosive ordnance disposal, divers or Special Warfare Combatant-craft Crewman, or in a nuclear rating.

"Of the sailors in those special categories, the reasoning they're not eligible is because they are in critical or undermanned ratings, or because we offered them SRBs for re-enlisting," Raines said.

Sailors can submit requests, going through their chain of command, to Navy Personnel Command. All separations under the program must be effected by Sept 15.

For the most part, officials anticipate mostly first-termers will take advantage, Raines said. "They make up the largest percentage of people getting out of the Navy anyway, and frankly, the longer you're in, the longer likely to stav."

The state of the s pace to retain 59.6 percent of eligible sallors in Zone A, or those with less than six years of service, for fiscal 2004. The goal is 56 percent. In Zone B (those with six to 10 years of service) the pace is 73.2 percent, above the target of 70 percent.

The percentages do not count those whose applications have yet to be processed, Raines said. If the Navy surpasses its reten-

Now, computers compare the product code to the item listed on the coupon and, if there is not an exact match, the coupon is kicked back, Blakley said.

Because of the upgrade, some shoppers may experience problems with their coupons not being accepted. Blakley suggests closer inspection when using coupons. "We certainly do not want to discourage people from using coupons," Blakely said. "If a shopper uses coupons for extra savings, more power to them."

She said shoppers must select the exact product featured on a coupon. For example, if a coupon offers savings for a specific name brand of a 16-ounce package of dry soup, a shopper cannot use the coupon on the same brand of canned soup.

"It's got to be an exact match, or it won't go," she said.

Coupons should be given to the cashier prior to the transaction, with the exception of two-for-one or buy-one-get-one-free coupons. These are best left with the products.

NATO's first senior NCO steps up effort to standardize alliance's enlisted corps

BY KEVIN DOUGHERTY

Stars and Stripes

CASTEAU, Belgium — On a recent tour of NATO installations, a Turkish soldier approached the top noncommissioned officer at NATO to commend him for trying to improve the alliance's enlisted corps.

"You give us hope," Marine Corps Sgt. Maj. Alford L. Mc-Michael said, repeating what the senior soldier had said. "You make us dream, again. We can be important to our country."

The effort to elevate — through training and education — the posture and performance of the NATO enlisted corps is primarily aimed at NATO's newer members, nations such as Estonia or Romania. But even old allies recognize the value of setting a uniform standard and sticking to it, McMichael said.

Achieving a level of standardization in areas such as job performance and personal conduct will take time to sink in, perhaps as long as a generation, said Mc-Michael, the alliance's first senior NCO. And yet that's a main focus of his and Gen. James L. Jones, the supreme allied commander Europe.

"Some of these nations only think leadership starts at the top, so they become stagnant," Mc-Michael said during a recent interview in his office at SHAPE headquarters in Casteau.

"In our system," he said, "we teach leadership from the lowest level.

"So, if something happens to [a unit's officer], a platoon sergeant doesn't wait until a new captain gets sent out to a fight. He steps up and leads the charge."

A case in point is the NCO campaign itself.

McMichael was set to retire last year after a four-year hitch as the Marine Corps' command sergeant major. Jones, who has known and worked with Mc-Michael for years, asked him to consider postponing his retirement to help the alliance develop a more professional NCO corps.

The 52-year-old took Jones up on his offer, arriving at SHAPE a year ago.

"The biggest apprehension came from the established countries, because they thought their culture would have to change," McMichael said. "We're not asking [them] to change. We're asking [them] to partner with us to help us bring the others up to that least?"

In September, McMichael and his staff plan to present Jones with a formal set of standards to guide the alliance's NCO corps. The standards focus on such issues as good order and discipline, training and personal appearance. A formal definition of an NCO is still in the works, but a preliminary draft refers to noncommissioned officers as "the backbone" of the alliance.

McMichael — shown above with hundreds of commemorative coins he has accumulated through the years — delayed his retirement to become the first senior noncommissioned officer to represent NATO's enlisted force.

"The NCOs are going to be key to this new NATO Response Force," said U.S. Air Force Col. Mark P. Sullivan, commandant of the NATO School in Oberammergau, Germany.

At the 2002 summit in Prague, Czech Republic, NATO nations concluded that the alliance needed to transform itself to stay relevant in a changing world. Among other things, the allies decided to form a quick response force and to create a leaner and more flexible force structure, one that empowers NCOs and follows a common standard.

To address the last issue, the alliance has decided to create an academy for NCOs assigned to, or working with, the alliance. There's no firm date, but it's likely to happen sooner rather than

"This is overdue," Sullivan said. "We've needed this for some time." Up until a couple of years ago, the NATO School in Oberammergau was open only to officers. However, expansion and the Partnership for Peace program for non-NATO nations led the school to open its doors on a limited basis to NCOs, though Sullivan noted there was some resistance at first.

Sullivan said instructors have "found an incredible discrepancy" in some classroom groups between students of various nations.

Catherine Combe is a senior noncommissioned officer in the French army. She also teaches at Oberammergau and finds many of the students eager to learn.

"They don't even know what they are hungry for," Combe said.

And yet, she adds, all of the time and money and effort go to waste if the sponsoring nation doesn't display the same eagerness to improve.

McMichael says he can help on that front by putting a NATO, not an American, face on it, and by preaching the team concept.

"Our goal," he said, "is the next generation."

Defense measure will help fund war

BY ALAN FRAM The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House-Senate bargainers agreed on a $417 billion defense bill that includes $25 billion for U.S. forces in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The compromise measure, which is mostly for 2005, also has money for war refugees in Sudan and American diplomats in Baghdad and Kabul. And it will provide $25 million each for buttressing security this summer in Boston and New York as they host, respectively, the Democratic and Republican presidential nominating conventions.

Congress is expected to approve the legislation next week, law-makers' last stretch of work before recessing until September.

With troops under fire in Iraq and Afghanistan, President Bush and members of both parties want the measure completed before the political party gatherings.

Speed is also a factor because lawmakers and the Pentagon are not sure there would otherwise be enough cash to pay for the two wars in the final weeks of the government's budget year, which runs through Sept. 30.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bill Young and other lawmakers said the legislation includes the $25 billion Bush requested in May for U.S. operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. The money will be available as soon as the bill is enacted.

The $25 billion is expected to be less than half what will ultimately be needed for the two wars next year.

Study: Too few family members get support

amily support professionals and volunteers have expanded programs to help military families cope with longer, more frequent separations due to operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Stabilizing military home life requires more command involvement, better marketing and outreach to families living off base, standardized staff training, and stronger partnerships with communities including local agencies, schools and even media, the report says.

NMFA, the "voice of military families," wrote the report based on responses from more than 2,500 military spouses to an online survey. NMFA also conducted spouse focus groups and asked family support providers to complete questionnaires. A NMFA team then analyzed the results,

Family support before 9/11 assumed predictable, limited deployments, not tours of a year or more for hundreds of thousands of troops, many of them mobilized National Guard members and reservists.

"A church would say 'Let's get a support group for families of deployed servicemembers.' That's a nice idea," said Raezer. "But how do you sustain those volunteer ef-Susan Evers, project coordinator has a husband and two sons in the Army. One son completed a tour in Iraq. The other could be sent. Evers said she hopes the report is read "by everyone, from headquarter staffs and service leaders down to unit commanders and volunteers, so that at every level they learn how to improve on what they do for families."

Some of what's being done is extraordinary and imaginative, NMFA officials found. Its own study was funded by Sears, Roebuck and Co., with part of a 52 million donation to NMFA. Most of that money is underwriting Operation Purple, special summer camps for military children in the United States to help deal with the stress of parents deployed. The full NMFA report and details of Operation Purple can be found at www.mmfa.org.

But NMFA also found disappointing levels of support. Frustration is higher among families living off base and, in some cases, hundreds of miles from military communities and base support programs. NMFA took special note of problems for families in understanding Tricare, accessing preventive mental health services and finding childcare.

Lisa Clay whose husband Don is a Marine Corps platon sergeant running daily patrols in Irray, helped research and write the report. Military spouses overall, she said, "aren't disgruntled" but they expect more thoughtful, coordinated help. Clay recalled, for example, that a hospital commander arranged a briefing for families on changes to Tricare. But it occurred at 11 a.m. on a weekday when many spouses are working.

Clay also noted that deploying troops are encouraged to provide spouses with powers of attorney. Yet some base finance office don't even recognize those powers, turn away spouses seeking copies of, or changes to, member leave and earnings statements, she said.

With family support programs so dependent on command involvement, one of NMFA's many recommendations is that attention to family needs be made a rated item on unit or base commanders' fitness reports.

Judge strikes ban on violent games

State's law covering some mature video game sales ruled too narrow

By GENE JOHNSON

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — A federal judge struck down Washington state's ban on selling some violent video games to minors, calling it a violation of free speech.

U.S. District Judge Robert Lasnik wrote Thursday that depictions of violence have been used throughout the country's history to convey important social messages, and that the Supreme Court has never upheld bans on violent depictions under obscenity laws.

The state's ban sought to prevent minors from buying or renting games that portray "realistic or photographic-like depictions of aggressive conflict" in which the players kill or injure law enforcement officers. The law included a provision to fine retailers $500 for violations.

Lasnik said the law was too narrow because it arbitrarily banned violence against police officers but not other depictions of violence, and too broad because it was unclear what games would fall under the han

"Would a game built around 'The Simpsons' or the 'Looney Tunes' characters be 'realistic' enough to trigger the act?" he wrote.

"The real problem is that [a store] clerk might know everything there is to know about the game and yet not be able to determine whether it can legally be sold to a minor."

To obey the law be said store

To obey the law, he said, store clerks would tend to be overly cautious in selling games to minors and game makers would tend to be overly cautious in designing them — resulting in a chilling effect on free speech.

The game industry welcomed the ruling and said it will continue to encourage retailers to voluntarily refuse to sell mature-rated games to children under 17, as movie theaters voluntarily check

"We were obviously really gratified by the ruling," said Doug Lowenstein, president of the Washington, D.C.-based Entertainment Software Association.

The state argued that the law focused on the state's compelling interest in curbing hostile and anti-social behavior among youths, including violence and aggression toward law enforcement officers,

Los Alamos stands down after lab security lapse

BY LESLIE HOFFMAN

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. —
All classified work at Los Alamos National Laboratory has come to a halt while officials conduct a wall-to-wall inventory of sensitive data.

The unprecedented stand-down began at noon Thursday, and the inventory of CDs, floppy disks and other data storage devices is expected to be completed within days, lab snokesman Kevin Roark said.

The stand-down comes after the lab reported last week that two items containing classified information turned up missing. The items were identified only as removable data storage devices.

It is the latest in a series of embarrassments that have prompted federal officials to put the Los Alamos management contract held by the University of California up for bid for the first time in the 61-year history of the lab.

The Energy Department has announced that Deputy Energy Secretary Kyle McSlarrow and Linton Brooks, head of the National Nuclear Security Administration, will personally oversee the probe into the latest security

Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham said he told McSlarrow earlier this week to use "all available mechanisms" to find the missing items, including polygraphs.

Despite efforts to reduce the lab's inventory of removable data storage devices and revamp custodial policies for the material, officials said some employees are simply not following the rules.

"This is the third incident in what is the third incident in wants to say, 'Get rid of the damn labs,' "said Ward Connerly, university regent, in San Francisco. However, he said he doesn't believe another institution could do the job as well.

Lab and university officials reiterated pledges to protect national security and said a culture change is needed at the lab.

"This behavior and these breaches of national security won't be tolerated," regents chairman Gerald Parsky said.

The university hasn't decided whether to compete for the management contract when it expires next year, although regents have told staff to prepare as though they will.

KUMBAKONAM, India Flames swept through a thatch-roofed school Friday, trapping dozens of children who clawed at brick and concrete in vain to escape after many of their teachers fled. At least 84 children were killed and 22 injured.

No teachers died, and a senior fire officer said it was because they abandoned the children and fled. But the district government administrator said it was too early to know, and he noted that some 700 children got out alive and were likely aided by teach-

The fire started in a kitchen and jumped across the flamma-ble roofs of the three-story, private Lord Krishna Middle School, said J. Radhakrishnan, the administrator for the Thanjavur district, 1,300 miles south of New Delhi, India's capital.

He said that when the fire began at 11 a.m., the building was packed with 800 students - most aged 6 to 13 — in rooms shared by up to six classes at a time.

Afterward, local television showed dozens of small, blackened bodies piled two or three deep, covering the entire floor inside a large hall. Some died a hospital, screaming in pain or lying unconscious in a large emergency ward. Doctors applied ointment on the scalded bodies of the injured, and nurses covered them with large banana leaves, believed to soothe the burning skin.

Parents, many crying, waved hand-held bamboo and plastic fans — despite air conditioning to soothe the inflamed wounds. Hundreds more waited outside the hospital.

By evening, 45 bodies had been cremated in mass ceremonies, Radhakrishnan said. Several bod-ies were taken for cremations in nearby villages, where many chil-dren came from. The official lowered the number of injured — ear-lier put at more than 100 — to 22. "As far as we can make out, the fire started in the kitchen of the school on the ground floor," Radhakrishnan told The Associat-"The sparks flying up would have set fire to t thatched roof on the first floor.

The school's long, narrow, windowless classrooms each had only one exit. A reporter for New Delhi Television News described marks on the walls that she said showed the children had tried to tear through the bricks and concrete.

Police later said they had ar-rested the school principal, Pulavar Palanichamy and three kitchen workers who were preparing lunch, and intended to charge them with negligence.

Crash prompts autobahn closure

BERLIN - A transport truck crashed and burst into flames on Friday, forcing the closure of a stretch of a major highway near the northern German city of Braunschweig, police said.

The driver of a truck carrying rubber and other goods apparently lost control of his vehicle on the A2 autobahn toward Berlin, a major east-west link, Friday morning. The truck skidded along a guard rail, then crashed into a sound protection wall and burst into flames.

The fire was so intense that the heat may have damaged a bridge next to the crash scene, and authorities said the highway would be closed at least through the weekend for inspections.

The truck driver and his passenger were seriously injured, but their injuries were not life-threatening, police said. From The Associated Press

Thanks for my life

I've been an employee of KBR for the last six months deployed in Balad, Iraq, as a truck driver hauling ice to different bases all over the country

On a night mission on June 29, our convoy was ambushed by a "daisy chain" of improvised explosive devices, rocket-propelled grenades and small-arms fire. The convoy consisted of about 20 vehicles of KBR and military vehicles, of which sever-al were disabled. Four persons — three military personnel and I — were wounded.

My vehicle was hit by an IED explosion on the front right side and shrapnel came through the passenger side window, tearing into my right arm and chest. I was bleeding all over the place, sending me into confusion and shock.

The next thing I remember is someone pulling me out of the truck, laying me on the ground and elevating my legs. Someone put an IV into my arm and kept pressure on my wounds. As I was being treated, I heard the sound of small-arms fire, which I believe were our guys keeping the enemy off of us long enough to get the injured into a medevac helicopter, which was called and responded very quickly. My purpose in writing is to thank the 1462nd Transportation Company attached to the 7th Transportation Battalion and their commander, Edward Cornish, They were the ones responsible for saving my life. I cannot tell you enough how professional and courageous this Army National Guard unit from Howell, Mich., is and how bravely they reacted under an intense amount of pressure. These guys were so cool and calm during the whole ordeal, like it happens to them every day. It just made me relax and calm down and I knew I was in good hands with them around Thanks, guys

A couple of days after the ordeal, they came by the hospital to check on me, and again I can't express what a great bunch of guys these are

You guys are in my prayers and those of my wife every day.

Come home safe and come home soon, and I'll buy the beer. Just let me know

More on Moore

The senior airman who wrote "Making more money" (July 7) is so out of touch with the facts it is ridiculous.

How about starting with the beginning of the letter: "It is nice to see Michael Moore making money off the Sept. 11 tragedy." Are you making extra money for being over here? I know I am, I also know the reason why I'm making more money It's because of the nature of the risk that is associated with doing a job over here. Have you stopped to realize the risk that is present when someone decides to rub the government the wrong way? Just ask Joseph C. Wilson, a former U.S. diplomat whose has charged the Bush administration with leaking the identity of his wife as a CIA covert operative, putting her in danger and possibly endangering her life. All because he questioned the pre-war intelligence on Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. The effort, and risk it takes to dig deep enough into the lying and stab-and-jab world of governmental cover-ups, should be rewarded.

About the writer's claims that the Democrats and Mike Moore will support anything that will get them a few more votes last time I checked this is a two-party system, and logic states that there can only be a winner and a loser. Wouldn't it be realistic to say that those of one side will always enjoy the idea of the other team making a huge mistake that will increase their chances of winning? I've seen Moore bag (former President) Clinton and the Demo

Explain to me how Moore's making documentaries hurts the effort and the people who work over here. Why don't you ask the guys who go out in the streets everyday, who are attacked time and time again? They are attacked not by the Iraqi WMD threat that was shoved down our throats last year, but by more terrorists.

crats on more than a few occasions. So, next lame statement please.

Why is it they are getting attacked by terrorists and not the Iraqi threat? It is because of the choices you, I and the rest of the American public were led to believe. The administration may have a good reason now for people to get shot at (since the fast-talkers have turned the issues to "see how he treats his people," instead of "WMD") but the initial reason was exaggerated. When Moore uses his freedom of sneech, it doesn't hurt my efforts to do my job. I would love to hear from you, specifically, on how he affects yours.

Finally I would like to say that end does not justify the means. Regardless of the end of this conflict, the means were wrong and, some could say impeachable. I remember when many Americans were calling for Clinton's impeachment over a mistake, not even comparable to what we've witnessed today. Where are those same righteous Americans now, when an even larger mistake has been made? With such disregard for the facts and truth, these actions beg for the question, "If we were lied to like this on this scale, what else could they be lying to us about?"

People - yes, even the writer - are entitled to their opinion, but people are not, however, entitled to their own facts.

Spc. Clayton Johnson Camp Victory, Iraq

Cell phones become spam's latest target

Unwanted promotions could grow more troublesome if text messaging increases

BY WENDY TANAKA

The Philadelphia Inquirer

No longer just the scourge of computer inboxes, spam has begun trickling into cell phones. Sometimes it's a text message that pops up on your cell-phone screen, advertising lewd or dubious services, or new offers from your cell-phone provider. Other screen, advertising lewd or dubious services, or new offers from your cell-phone provider. Other times it's a harmless message transmitted via the short-range technology known as Bluetooth, inviting passers-by into a nearby coffee shop.

So far, it seems to be mostly a minor annovance.

"I just delete them," said Colin Powers, 20, a student at the Art Institute of Philadelphia. He has received a few unsolicited text messages hawking "special offers" at Web sites.

And while Christian Petrucci, 33, a lawyer, said he has not received spam on his cell phone yet, he thinks it could explode the way Internet spam has.

"Spam wasn't an e-mail problem a few years ago," he said. Is cell-phone spam likely to evolve into something that big, something approaching the scale of e-mail spam? Experts are divided.

"Stay tuned. We, too, will get swamped." said David Farber, a computer science professor at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh and former chief technologist at the Federal Communications Commission.

Wireless providers are aware of the potential for a problem, but they say they are guarding against it.

"We've been successful at beating it back," said Sheldon Jones, spokesman for Verizon Wireless. "But like your home computer, there are some that get through."

In Japan, where text messaging is more popular than talking on cell phones, wireless spam was a huge problem a few years ago. NTT DoCoMo Inc., Japan's largest cell-phone provider, said spam text messages overloaded its systems at times in 2000 and 2001, freezing some customers' screens and spreading programs that catused some phones to autoof 911 did Japan's equivalent of 911

The company eventually brought the problem under control by installing security and spam-filtering software on its network and in its phones.

John Summers, global director for managed security at Pennsylvania-based Unisys Corp., said U.S. cell-phone users are unlikely to face similar problems, for several peaces. First, U.S. cell-phone customers do comparatively little team messaging. According to Forrester Research Inc., 17 percent of U.S. cell-phone customers were sending text messages as of the third quarter of last year. By comparison, NTT DoCoMo said about 80 nervent of its customers use text messaging.

U.S. cell-phone companies have learned from the mistakes of carriers in other countries and have installed technology to prevent spam and viruses from reaching cell phones.

Also, it's easier to detect cell-phone spammers than e-mail spammers.

Cell-phone messages come from one of six carriers, as opposed to thousands of traditional Internet service providers.

Text messages sent from one carrier to another may not go through, because the networks are not always technically compatible.

Plus it's expensive to send cell-phone spam. Most carriers charge between 8 cents and 12 cents per message, while sending spam over the Internet is virtually free.

And receiving text messages costs, too — typically 2 cents to 3 cents per message.

Cell-phone companies have a Christian Petrucci, a lawyer shown last month in Philadelphia, says he has not received spam on his cell phone. The trend seems to be expanding, though few expect cell-phone spam to cause as much trouble in the States as it has in Japan, where text messaging is more popular.

strong financial interest in keepinteresting spam under control, Summers said, because text-messaging represents a potentially lucrative revenue stream. They have been encouraging "texting," particularly among teenagers and young adults.

"That's the pot of gold they want to get to," Summers said. "If things like spamming or message abuse start making that unpopular, it damages that opportunity."

In most cases, customers can ask their cellular providers to remove charges incurred from spam. Verizon Wireless, for instance, said it will credit accounts for messages customers identify as spam.

And cell-phone companies say they monitor call and text volumes continuously for spam.

"When we see a spike in the number of calls or text messages, we know something's going on," Sprint PCS spokesman Charles Fleckenstein said. "We can see how our switches

"We can see how our switches are handling the traffic."

As for those unsolicited commercial text messages that have begun making their way onto cell-phone screens via Bluetooth technology. They are free to send to be causing much concern. Bluetooth was invented to let a gadget such as a cell phone be used with, say, a wireless headset, but the same short-range technology can be used to send a text message to be used to send a text message to phone.

That is what happened recently to clothing designer Lizz Wasserman, 23, as she walked past a cafe in New York City. The message that popped up on her phone: "Don't you want a cup of coffee?"

Keep vacation on budget

CBS MarketWatch

NEW YORK — Vacations are a great way to relax and have fun, but they can also be stressful on your finances. That's why 80 percent of travelers this summer are planning to use budgets to keep spending in line, reports Visa USA.

in line, reports Visa USA.

To budget for your upcoming vacation, consider the following:

■ Preparation expenses: If you're traveling abroad, account for passport, visa and inoculation fees. Also include what you'll need to pay to care for pets or children remaining at home.

■ Transportation: If you're flying, figure out what you'll pay not only for tickets, but also for transportation to and from the airport (including rental cars) and parking. If you're driving, add in the costs of fuel, tolls, meals and hotels for the duration of your drive.

■ On-site costs: Once you reach your destination, you'll need to think about the cost of your room, meals, tips, phone or Internet charges, as well as souvenirs and gifts. Estimate what you'll pay for activities, equipment rental and other types of entertainment

Subtract the total expected expenses from your vacation savings.

Then you'll know how much extra you can afford to spend if any — on vacation fun.

Another way to stick to a budget is to limit the number of credit cards you bring along. By using a debit card or checks, you'll limit yourself to spending the money you already have in your accounts.

More nurses-to-be

SC GREENVILLE — The University of South Carolina Upstate plans to double its nursing school enrollment in the next year. Chancellor John Stockwell said the school's nursing program will enroll up to 128 candidates each year. Stockwell said the university plans to build a 524 million Health Education Complex on its Spartanburg campus.

The school changed its name last month from USC Spartanburg.

Murder charge

ELMHURST — Prosecutors said they charged a 38-year-old man with first-degree murder in the death of a high school student. They said Anson Paape shot the teen after he reused to play a version of Russian roulette. Paape allegedly loaded a revolver with a single bullet, spun the cylinder and fired at Michael Murray's forehead.

Lonely peacock

MA LEOMINSTER — A pining peacock living in a Leominster garage got no love from a neighbor, whose complaints spurred its owner to relocate the lonely bird in the interests of community relations.

Eunice Lloyd kept her 9-year-old peacock Boaz in her garage for six years, along with the bird's mate, a peahen named Ruth. Boaz's keening mating cry, which lasts from mid-spring to midsummer, seemed a little louder this year, after Ruth died last winter.

A neighbor fed up with Boaz's cries complained about a month ago, and City Councilor Richard

Cockfighting conviction

HI WAILUKU — A 61-year-old man has been convicted of racketeering, first-degree promotion of gambling and cruelty to animals in the first trial stemming from a yearlong undercover investigation into cocklighting operations on Mau.

William Dutro, of Wailuku, was among 35 people indicted in the investigation conducted in 2002. More than 20 are awaiting trial, while others have entered into plea agreements, prosecutors said.

Manlapao attended a series of cockfights between February and June 2002, observing who was participating actively and making bets. He testified that Dutro was observed weighing roosters before their participation in fights at events in Waikapu and Puunene.

Hupp said Dutro was the first to go to trial because at the time of the incident he was on parole on a firearms conviction.

The move comes two months after Dallas oil tycoon and Panhandle landowner T. Boone Pickens declined to sell the authority water rights he owns or controls on about 110,000 Panhandle acres. Satterwhite said.

The water authority supplies water to about 500,000 people, two-thirds of the population of the South Plains and the Panhandle

Salmonella outbreak

PA PITTSBURGH — At least 34 cases of salmonella poisoning from a strain of the bacteria often found on fresh produce have been reported in western Pennsylvania since late last week, health officials said.

Investigators trying to track down the source of the outbreak are interviewing the victims about what and where they ate in recent days.

Richard McGarvey, spokesman for the state Health Department, said the infections were all caused by the same type of salmonella bacteria. But he said it is too early to connect the outbreak to a specific food supplier or other outlet.

Robinson and Artavis Walker, 23, were lighting fireworks and throwing them out their car's windows the night of June 28 when a cigarette fell into the back seat and set off the remaining fireworks.

Robinson, who was in the passenger seat, escaped the flaming vehicle a few blocks before it crashed into a light pole. Walker was burned over 90 percent of his body and died the next day.

Adviser cannot return

TOPEKA — A federal judge on Wednesday threw out a court order that allowed the adviser of the Kansas State University student newspaper to resume his duties after he was removed amid criticism of the paper's coverage.

U.S. District Judge Julie Robinson ruled there was insufficient evidence to grant Ron Johnson's request for a temporary injunction to prohibit Kansas State from reassigning him from the post he held for 15 years.

Johnson was removed in May after the newspaper was sharply criticized for failing to cover a regional conference on black student government that drew 1,000 people to campus in February.

Johnson sued the university, alleging the reassignment was an attempt to control the content of the Kansas State Collegian.

New airport plans

ME PORTLAND — Aviation of-ficials plan to introduce new flight patterns and procedures at the Portland International Jetport. They're intended to reduce the roar of planes over many residential neighborhoods. The changes stem from a three-year study that was prompted by complaints of booms and rumbles during takeoff and landing.

Less license cheating

MS JACKSON — Nearly 60 percent of Mississippians applying for regular driver's licenses have failed the general knowledge test since the state switched to a computerized testing system in December. Officials say only 20 percent failed before the switch. Mississippi was one of 15 states last year to receive new automated testing services. The technology helps eliminate cheating

Buckling up is good

CHICAGO — Illinois drivers are safer since a new seat belt law took effect, state transportation officials said. They cited 63 fewer automobile-accident fatalities from a year earlier. Some of the profits pay annual dividends to Alaska residents.

Firefighters scrutinized

TX HOUSTON — Houston Fire Chief Phil Boriskie says eight firefighters whose job applications have been questioned for possibly withholding damaging personal information remain on the job.

Boriskie told the Houston Chronicle for a story in Friday's editions that information from Assistant Fire Chief Herbert Sims that the firefighters had been fired was incorrect.

Boriskie said the eight were on active duty, but their futures with the department are subject to further review.

Boriskie said one firefighter was terminated two months ago because of the investigation by the city's Inspector General's Office.

Fire Department officials said nine other employees whose files had been questioned were cleared of any wrongdoing.

A nine-month investigation is under way of the fire department's hiring and recruiting practices.

Missing no more

OH NEWARK — A girl report-ed missing in California nine years ago was found in Ohio, living under a different name with her mother, authorities said.

Prosecutors said a woman recognized the girl's picture from the Web site of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and called sheriff's deputies.

The girl, Vanesa Brancheau, was 5 when she and her mother, Sheri Lyn Taylor, were reported missing in 1995 from the Los Angeles community of Woodland Hills, the county sheriff's office said in a news rele

Sheriff's Cant Rod Mitchell said Thursday that Taylor indicated that she and her husband had been fighting for custody of the girl at the time of the disappearance.

No charges have been filed, and Mitchell said more investigating was needed.

two others for whom he purchased alcohol and cigarettes, Marquis said. "It tears me apart that I hurt you. If I were to read that someone else hurt you, I would be furious." Marquis said he has struggled to overcome a bipolar disorder for the past two years. Although he said that should not excuse him, he maintained the disorder contributed to his behavior.

Bison hazing continues

MT HELENA — A federal anpeals court on Wednesday upheld a judge's decision to dismiss a lawsuit environmental groups filed to stop the hazing of bison wandering from Yellowstone National Park.

A three-member panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that U.S. District Judge Charles Lovell properly dismissed the suit in April 2003 because the groups had not proven their case against the federal agencies involved in the management of bison.

The groups had argued that efforts to haze or capture bison that leave the park were adversely affecting nearby nesting bald eagles, and that officials had not properly studied the effects on the protected birds.

Steinbeck heirs in bitter estate fight

NEW YORK - John Steinbeck's surviving blood heirs are suing the estate of his third wife, Elaine Steinbeck, alleging a "30-year hidden conspiracy" to cheat them of royalties and copyright control and detailing a bitter family feud worthy of a Steinbeck novel.

The late writer's son, Thomas Steinbeck, and grand-daughter, Blake Smyle, filed suit Thursday in the U.S. District Court in New York, seeking greater ownership of "The Grapes of Wrath" and other Steinbeck classics and monetary damages of at least $18 million.

"This is not a happy day for my clients," said the plaintiffs' attorney, Mark. S. Lee, of Manatt Phelps & Phillips. "This is an unfortunate but necessary step in retrieving rights my clients believe belong to them. Defendants include McIntosh & Otis, Inc., a literary agency that handles John Steinbeck's literary estate; two sisters of Elaine Steinbeck; Elaine Steinbeck's daughter from a previous marriage, Waverly Scott Kaffaga; and four grandchildren.

John Steinbeck died in 1968, but his books remain in great demand, "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men" sell hundreds of thousands of copies annually, and "East of Eden," an epic story of family rivalry, was an Oprah Winfrey book club pick last year. His works are also frequently filmed and staged

The author's literary estate was originally bequeathed to Elaine Steinbeck, whom he married in 1950. In the early 1980s, the author's sons from a previous marriage, Thomas and John IV, sued for partial control and the case was settled out of court.

The current suit alleges numerous acts of wrongdoing since that settlement, including illegally claiming trade mark rights to the author's name. Steinbeck's heirs personally attack Elaine Steinbeck, who died in 2003, and John Steinbeck IV, who died in 1991 and is accused of stealing personal papers from his brother, falsely claiming he destroyed them and later selling some for profit.

FACES 'N' PLACES

Jackie Chan does battle with an enemy in China in Walt Disney Pictures' "Around the World in 80 Days." The actor star says age is becoming a factor in his ability to do stunts.

Action star wants to shed his 'happy-go-lucky' image

By JAYMES SONG The Associated Press

ackie Chan is attempting his most daring stunt ever.

Chan wants to shed his happy-go-lucky, action star image to become a "real actor" who uses more dialogue and emotion than punches and kicks.

"I want to change. I want to be like Robert DeNiro. I want to be Dustin Hoffman." said the big-screen star from Hong Kong. "I don't always want it to be like the old days. ... I want to change my image. I want to become an actor who can fight - not an action star

Chan met with reporters in Hawaii while promoting his latest film, "Around the World in 80 Days," and to officially open his first U.S. restaurant, adding to the 40 he owns in Asia.

The biggest reason Chan wants his image from an acrobatic, high-flying martial arts master to a serious, more subdued actor is age. Chan, famous for performing his own harrowing stunts, turned 50 in

"Even though I'm pretty good, how long can I keep fighting?" he said. "Look at Robert DeNiro. Look at Clint Eastwood. They still can act.

The film star said he will probably do his own stants in action films "for another five years," but he wants more dramatic roles like those in movies such as 1979's "Kramer vs. Kramer," which featured Hoffman. Chan recently attended a fund-raising screening of "Around the World in 80 Days," a reprise of the Jules Verne classic. The film was released by Disney.

"Around the World in 80 Days" has already generated a buzz not necessarily for Chan's performance, but for the appearance of the action hero turned politician, Arnold Schwarzenegger, who plays the womanizing Prince Hapi

"He's not that tough. He's a very nice guy," Chan said. "We talked a lot of jokes. Most of the time he was hiding in the corner playing chess."

The $110 million film is the latest of Chan's Hollywood comedy-action films. "The Medallion." "Shanghai Knights" and The Tuxedo all brought in lackluster results at the U.S. box office.

Chan is also working on a new sequel to his popular "Police Story" drama series that helped him gain international fame. He plays a crime fighter in "New Police dealing with gangsters and the death of his comrades.

The film, set to be released in Asia this fall, features several fight scenes and big explosions. It also gives Chan a chance to show his serious side, or what he calls being a "true actor."

"You can see it's a pure drama, but of course you have to have action. Otherwise I wouldn't have the international market," he said. "It's a heavy drama with action. There's no comedy

Chan also will work on "The Myth. which he describes as an "Indiana Jones type adventure, before starting work on Rush Hour 3

Hawaii is one of the spots being considered for filming the third in the popular "Rush Hour" series, competing with Thailand and Japan. Chan said he prefers Hawaii for its scenery, but co-star Chris Tucker would rather shoot in Asia.

From humble beginnings, Chan began his career trying to prove himself as an action star in Hong Kong. He became a huge star in Asia. Then he took on Hollywood.

"Right now, I have to prove I'm not ac-tion anymore," he said. "That's difficult because for all those years, for the big studios, everybody knows Jackie as an action star.

"I don't think they'll give me $20 million to make 'Kramer vs. Kramer.' They don't want to take the risk," he said. "But they're willing to spend $100 million to make 'Rush Hour 3' because this is a business.

Smith: Robots shouldn't look human

Will Smith figures robots will take over many domestic and menial tasks for humans

He just doesn't expect them to look much like his humanoidlike machine co-stars in the new film "I, Robot." Smith, 35, plays a detective in 2035 who suspects a robot has murdered the reclusive scientist responsible for technological innovations that have populated the world with machine servants vaguely resembling humans

In real life, though, humans have a psychological barrier against machines that look like themselves, Smith said.

"Technology is heading away from that, because people don't respond well to human-looking robots, especially if they're over 4 feet," Smith told The Associated Press in an interview last week promoting "I, Robot," which opens

Nick and Jessica's family plan

Pop star couple Jessica Simpson and Nick Lachey want to go from "Newlyweds" to "Parenthood.

The married stars of the MTV reality series "Newlyweds: Nick & Jessica" tell Us Weekly magazine they plan to start a family in the not-too-distant future.

"I don't think it will be in six months or a year, but after that, Nick's getting old," the 24-year-old Simpson told the

The 30-year-old Lachey told Us at a Big Brothers Big Sisters event in New York City: "We'd love to have our own children, but we have a heart for kids, and we'd love to adopt."

The couple are considering adopting a teenage child from an underdeveloped country

As a teen, Simpson and her family regularly visited an orphanage in Mexi-

However, cameras likely won't be invited into family life. The couple say this may be the last season for their MTV show.

Horoscope

The new moon in Cancer is like the emotional equivalent of moving into a new home. Just as all of your belongings must be accounted for and placed in their Joyce Jillson new surroundings, your new feelings must be recognized and put in their proper perspective. It's exciting when you can go forward in relationships without carrying the old baggage. TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 17). It's a year of expectations surpassed, so set your sights high! Always have a Plan A as well as a Plan B, and you'll succeed where others have failed. Finances are improved when you put your heart into your work. You'll need to rack up extra hours in September. Couples go on an exotic trip in December. Sagittarius or Aquarius love is favored

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

There are numerous prospects in your realm today. Part of being creatively aware is being able to recognize opportunity when it shows itself. You'll make a great discovery while looking for something entirely unrelated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Sometimes, you notice what's wrong without giving credit to what is right. Don't make this mistake today, though, as there are many sensitive souls who will take issue with your approach. This afternoon features a #### political game. GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

You know what you want, but there may be an unconscious goal that is conflicting with your larger aim. The more honest you are, the more chance you have of eliminating all things in opposition to your goal.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Reflecting on past mistakes and glories helps you make solid career decisions. Make contact with people from your past. It won't be awkward - in fact, you'll be received with open arms by long-lost friends and

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Change is gradual, as much as you'd like it to be sweeping. Just as it's difficult to recognize the growth of a child you see every day, you may not notice differences in yourself. But you can trust that you are #### blossoming. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). There's not an area of your life that couldn't use the "less is more" strategy now. Friendships grow tighter when you don't try too hard. You're romanti cally more alluring and more in demand at work.

LIBRA (Sept.

23-0ct. 23). Do anything you can think of to simpli fy your life. The more straightforward your activities are, the more time you'll have to pursue what you really enjoy.

Tonight, you could become enam ored of someone strong and able.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Listen to what you're thinking about when you're seemingly not thinking about anything at all. It is in those in-between spaces that your wishes and desires live. Tune in, and write them down.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're feeling the pain of the world. Everywhere you look, you are getting evidence of the frailty of the human condition. Try to also see the strength humans possess. We've survived this long, right?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19). While attempting to concen trate on your own business, you'll be distracted, coerced and diverted by truly annoying people. Minimize the time you spend caught up in matters you're really not willing to do anything about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Try many options until you find the one you are most passionate about. The fire in your belly will give you clarity of purpose, without which all actions are merely reactions. Don't be sucked in by the promise of a quick buck.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

Your time is so valuable, you'll have to say "no" several times before noon in order to safeguard it! The vampires are out! Romance is going well now that a certain truth is in the onen. You feel more able to be yourself.

Find a balance for mom on chemo

Dear Annie: MV mom, who is a fairly active and healthy person, was recently diagnosed with breast cancer. Two weeks after the diagnosis, she had the lump removed. This week, she starts chemotherapy. I have tried to be supportive, but I don't want to treat Mom as if she's an invalid. My father, on the other hand, is taking this very hard and has told Mom that he doesn't want her to leave the house for the entire treatment period of several weeks. He also told her she must wear a surgical mask if she goes out in public.

Lunderstand that Mom's white blood cell count will be down and she is more susceptible to infection, but I think putting her in "lockdown" will depress her. Dad won't listen to a word I say I'm afraid his paranoia will kill her faster than any disease she

Dear N.L.: There may be western-style restaurants where patrons are expected to keep their hats on, but otherwise, hats should be removed in restaurants. Etiquette rules say the only exception is a hat worn for religious purposes, although we think those who wear hats to cover a medical condition also should get a pass. # Monsoon-season death toll above 400 in South Asia

By FARID HOSSAIN The Associated Press

DHAKA, Bangladesh - Monsoon floods continued to wreak havoc across India, Bangladesh and Nepal, submerging more villages while pushing the death toll higher with possibly three more months of annual rains to go, officials said Friday.

About 400 people in South Asia have died since the monsoon started last month, with new deaths reported in Bangladesh and Nepal on Friday, according to official tallies and news reports. Last year, monsoon flooding in the region killed 1,500 people from mid-June to mid-October

In Bangladesh, 15 people — including eight children — drowned in flood waters on Thursday, raising the death toll there to 83, the Sangbad and Bangladesh Observer dailies reported.
About 15,000 people fled for higher ground after the Padma River burst through an embank-ment Thursday in western Bang-ladesh, inundating 15 villages, re-lief officials said.

The Jamuna River surged through another mud embankment in the northern region, mean-while, leaving about 15,000 people stranded, the officials said on condition of anonymity.

Floods caused by heavy rains have engulfed nearly half of Bangladesh, leaving more than 5 million people marooned in their houses, or huddled on embankments or in

In India, 235 people have per-ished in landslides, building col-lapses, or from waterborne dis-ease. Many others have drowned or been electrocuted since the monsoon began. No new deaths were reported in India on Friday, although weather officials predicted heavy rains in Bihar, Assam and other eastern states, where most flood-re-lated deaths have occurred.

Flood-affected villagers huddle in a boat as they try to move to safer areas Friday in the eastern Indian state of Bihar. The death toll in South Asia due to monsoon floods has risen to 400, and millions have been left stranded.

In Nepal, fresh rainfall was making it difficult for rescuers to reach areas hit by landslides and flooding, as the Himalayan kingdom's death toll increased to 77 on Fri-day, officials said.

Rescue helicopters with food medicine and tents were grounded by deteriorating weather in the capital, Katmandu, said Home Ministry spokesman Gopendra Pan-

A special coast guard officer patrols at the main port of Piraeus, near Athens, in May. In addition to the $1.2 billion Greece will spend on security. NATO said Friday that its entire Mediterranean naval fleet will be assigned to Olympics security.

NATO ships on board to aid Olympics

The Associated Press

PIRAEUS, Greece - NATO's entire Mediterranean naval fleet will be assigned to protect the Olympics as part of the alliance's unprecedented role in bolstering security for the games, the flotilla's commander said Friday.

Rear Adm. Hans Jochen Witthauer of Germany said all vessels under his command will work alongside Greek maritime forces to monitor the seas during the Aug. 13-29 Games.

The Standing Naval Force Mediterranean, based in Naples, Italy, includes more than a dozen frigates, destroyers and other vessels.

NATO also plans to conduct surveillance flights over Greece, which asked for help from its NATO allies to expand its Olympic security.

But Witthauer noted that full monitoring of Greece's vast coastline and hundreds of islands "will be a challenge."

"Every little fishing boat can easily pick somebody up and can more easily sneak up on a boat," he

NATO will operate outside Greek territorial waters. He refused to give greater details of NATO's naval duties during the Olympics

But the force has been involved out the eastern Mediterranean since shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks in New York and Washington.

Maritime protection has taken a prominent role in Greece's $1.2 bilon security network.

Greece is a major destination along illegal smuggling routes for immigrants and goods, Also, Olympic dignitaries, heads of state and others are expected to stay aboard at least eight cruise shins in the port of Piraeus. Some global security analysts predict that terrorist groups could be studying attacks on shipping lanes and other targets at sea.

Patient's penis allegedly cut off

BUCHAREST, Romania - Medical authorities are investigating a Romanian doctor after he alleg-edly cut off a patient's penis accidentally during tes-ticle surgery, officials said Friday.

Mircea Cinteza, chairman of Romania's Doctors College, said colleagues would meet Friday to decide whether the unidentified urologist is guilty of malpractice

The patient's penis was severed during an operation at a Bucharest hospital on Tuesday.

Ioan Lascar, a plastic surgeon who performed an operation on the man Thursday to help him urinate. said the patient was in stable condition.

Lascar said the 34-year-old man would undergo reconstruction surgery in the coming months but the chances of success are unknown.

Even with Bryant, Lakers are shaky

BY MARK WHICKER The Orange County (Calif.) Register

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. when the two could stand to be in the same city with each other, Kobe Bryant admiringly gave Shaquille O'Neal his own hip-hop nickname: Wilt Chamberneezy

On Thursday, Bryant sat in a quiet practice gym and insisted that his own nickname shouldn't be Mack E. Ovelli.

First, though, The Prince signed a contract for seven years and $136.4 million to become the central nervous system for the Los Angeles Lakers, such as they

At the very least he is finally the master of his basketball universe. The Lakers belong to Bryant more exclusively than most NBA teams have belonged to any-

But it was important to Bryant to convince the city that he was a mere bystander to the Lakers great unraveling, a stance that will bring laughter from Montana to Miami

"Shaquille (O'Neal) had to make a decision to take care of his family," Bryant said. "Dr (Jerry) Buss and Phil (Jackson) had some disagreements. I wish both of them well in their lives.

"Ultimately I wanted to come back with Phil and Shaquille and play for another championship We had some great years together. I've been here eight years and we've played for the title four times. Shaq and I played well together We had our disagree ments and arguments but I told the Lakers that I wanted to keep playing with Shaquille. In a perfect world, we'd all be back to

Commentary

How did we suffer the misconception that Bryant arranged all this? Silly question

"It was you guys (media), doing what you do best," Bryant said.

"I didn't laugh (at the speculation). It angers me, it upsets me, it hurts me. I had nothing to do with Truthfully, Bryant would not be the first Laker to get his coach fired Ask Paul Westhead about Magic Johnson Ask Pat Riley about the coup plotters in 1990, after the Lakers were bounced by Phoenix. It also happened to Butch van Breda Kolff at the hands of Wilt Chamberlain.

Someone reminded Bryant that Jackson recently said the championships weren't enough for Kobe. "Yeah, I saw that," Bryant said, shaking his head. "I couldn't believe that. The championships are what I play for." Then he admitted that he might not be playing for another championship very soon.

"It'll be an uphill battle," he said. "We're not even close to what we were. We just lost the most dominant force in the game Dr. Buss has changed the direction of the team. We, as soldiers, have to do our part.

Then, amusingly, Bryant described himself as "just a piece in the puzzle. Sitting beside Bryant during this exercise in aerobic semantics was Mitch Kupchak, the aging general manager

"I felt it should have been an easy decision," Kupchak said. "Especially considering all the Lakers had to offer.

His seven-year contract and Shaquille O'Neal's departure leave Kobe Bryant, above, in charge of the depleted Los Angeles Lakers.

He meant more years and money than anyone else could bring

Yet it says quite a bit about Bryant's opaque qualities that Kupchak, who has known Bryant all these years, had no idea what would happen.

For all the pretty things he said about his heart belonging to the Lakers, the fact is that Bryant kept Kupchak hanging while he considered playing for the Clippers, the Lakers' fellow tenants and their bipolar opposites. Nothing would have been more embarrassing for the premier franchise

"Finally Kobe said he was going to sign, and there was a feeling of iov. I do know that if he had not signed, it wouldn't have been good day in Laker history," Kunchak said.

That's because Derek Fisher signed with Golden State for $37 million. Fisher leaves, regrettably, as a footnote, when in reality he was one of the great playoff weapons in Lakers history — and his 0.4 earthquake shot in San Antonio would have been known as the all-time Lakers moment if the club had gone ahead and won the championship. One way the Pistons beat the Lakers was by never leaving Fisher "He'll always be a Laker in our minds," Kupchak said. Just who is a Laker now?

Well, there's Gary Payton at Bryant, Lamar Odom, Luke

Walton and Caron Butler are on the perimeter. Brian Grant and several stiffs to be named later will play cen-If Karl Malone doesn't join that list, the Lakers will have to hustle to even make the playoffs in a conference that was good anyway features Tracy now McGrady, Carlos Boozer and Kenyon Martin.

All in all, it was a typically contradictory day for Bryant, a guy who has shown little inclination to play for his country but who showed up Thursday in a USA warmup suit.

The Lakers' summer of all fears is not over. Bryant's rhetoric on Thursday was ultimately insignificant. It doesn't matter what we believe. The Prince has a dozen citizens of Colorado to per-

Martin traded to Nuggets for three first-round picks New Jersey will get one of Den-

BY JOHN MARSHALL

The Associated Press

DENVER - Carmelo Anthony helped the Denver Nuggets reach the playoffs for the first time in nine years.

They hope Kenyon Martin can help them take the next step. Denver acquired Martin in a sign-and-trade deal with New Jersey on Thursday, sending three fu-ture first-round draft picks to the Nets for the All-Star forward The deal a result of several days of on-again, off-again talks between the teams, was complet-ed after Martin agreed to a seven-year contract with the Nets.

"Any time you have a chance to add a player of the stature of Kenyon Martin, somebody who has been to the finals, who has been an All-Star, who plays with the ferocity that he plays with, that is an opportunity you really can't pass up," Nuggets General Manager Kiki Vandeweghe said. 'We are very, very lucky to have been in a position to take advantage of his being available.

The New Jersey Nets felt that signing Kenyon Martin to a big contract would have hindered their ability to remain a contender in the Eastern Conference.

New Jersey was expected to match any offers on Martin, a restricted free agent, but the Nuggets were set to offer him a front-loaded contract with a hefty signing bonus that would have had costly luxury tax ramifications for incoming Nets owner Bruce Ratner.

ver's first-rounders along with picks that once belonged to the Los Angeles Clippers and Phila-I felt that the magnitude of the contract, both in its first year due to the signing bonus as well as over its duration, would seriously impair our ability to sign enough quality players," Nets President Rod Thorn said.

The Nuggets have been stockpiling draft picks in Vandeweghe's three seasons as GM, adding to that stash by trading St. Joseph's guard Jameer Nelson, the team's first-round pick this year. The deal with Orlando gave Denver potentially five first-round draft picks in the next three seasons and cleared about $23 million in salary cap space.

The Nuggets had been stingy with their draft picks in the past, but the chance to pick up Martin was too good to pass up.

The overall No. 1 pick of the 2000 draft, Martin averaged 16.7 points and 9.5 rebounds last sea-son. He is known as one of league's best defensive forwards and is a strong finisher on the break, which should fit in well with Denver's uptempo style. We view Kenyon as a difference maker," Vandeweghe said. The deal could weaken New Jersey's chances of remaining one of the elite teams in the Eastern Conference.

After reaching the conference finals in consecutive seasons, the Nets were knocked out in seven games in a second-round series this year by Detroit.

Martin will be hard to replace and New Jersey has little depth at power forward. Third-year for-ward Brian Scalabrine and veteran Aaron Williams are the most likely candidates to step into Martin's spot after Rodney Rogers became a free agent.

"This was an extremely difficult decision for our franchise, Thorn said. "This core group of players has had an amazing run over the past few years, and we will work diligently toward once again competing for an NBA

Agent says G Fisher signs with Warriors

OAKLAND, Calif. — Point guard Derek Fisher has agreed to a six-year, $37 million contract with the Golden State Warriors, his agent, Mark Bartelstein, said

A Warriors spokesman said the deal hadn't been finalized.

Fisher spent eight seasons with the Los Angeles Lakers, who drafted him out of Arkansas-Lit-tle Rock in 1996. The Lakers won three championships with Fisher as a primary ballhandler for Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant, but when Los Angeles signed Gary Payton last summer, Fisher was relegated to the bench.

Fisher averaged just 7.1 points and 2.3 assists last season as Pavton's backup, but didn't complain about his diminished role. In Game 5 of the second round of the playoffs. Fisher made one of the greatest shots in the Lakers' storied playoff history: an 18-foot jumper as time expired to heat the San Antonio Spurs.

But Fisher wanted more playing time next season, and it probably wasn't available in Los Ange-

Fisher will join a crowded back-court in Golden State, with Speedy Claxton and Nick Van Exel also on the roster. But Van Exel and Claxton both spent significant portions of last season on the injured list, and forward Mike Dunleavy was forced to play point guard in the final weeks of the season.

Manu Ginboili, the best player out of Argentina, re-signed with San Antonio, which also signed free agent guard Brent Barry.

Ginobili's deal reportedly was for six years and $52 million, while Barry's four-year deal was believed worth between $22 million and $24 million.

Armstrong's big ascent

Gains 2:30 on top rival after climb in the Pyrenees

By JOHN LEICESTER

The Associated Press LA MONGIE France - Lance

Armstrong took a big step toward a record sixth straight Tour de France crown on Friday by surging past key rivals on the first climb in the Pyrenees

The Texan moved from sixth to second in the overall standings following a ride in which he was runner-up to stage winner Ivan Basso of Italy.

Jan Ullrich, Tyler Hamilton, Iban Mayo and Roberto Heras were among the pre-Tour contenders whose hopes of dethroning the five-time champion faded as Armstrong powered up the ascent ahead of them.

Riders started the 12th stage under blazing sunshine, then got doused by rain before emerging into sunny weather on the last of two major climbs on the 122.7-mile trek from Castelsarrasin to the La Mongie ski station.

"It was a great day, especially with the weather," Armstrong "First the heat, then the thunder, then the sun again. For the overall standings, it is great.

But he wasn't ready to declare victory over Ullrich, his German challenger. Another Pyrenean stage, the Alps and a final time trial await before the July 25 finish in Paris.

"Jan's not finished," Armstrong said. "He starts slow and he's a tough guy who doesn't give up. He might have taken one on the chin today, but he always comes back and is strong in the last week.'

Ullrich, the 1997 Tour winner, lost 2 minutes, 30 seconds to Armstrong - a major setback. Hamilton gave up 3:27 while Heras was 2:57 behind. Iban Mayo of Spain was 1:03 back.

"I am disappointed today of course," said Ullrich, a five-time Tour runner-up. "It was actually going well until the rain. But I have a good team and we are not giving un.

"Armstrong is the strongest man on this Tour," Basso said. think he's still got gas in his tank

Armstrong is 5:24 behind French champion Thomas Voeckler, who struggled in the mountain stage but retained the yellow jersey.

Voeckler had been leading Armstrong by more than nine minutes before the grueling stage. He placed 41st on Friday, 3:59 behind Armstrong and Basso Armstrong is eyeing the second Pyrenean stage Saturday as an-other chance to further bury his rivals. If he triumphs and they falter again, the 127.7-mile route from Lannemezan to the Plateau de Beille could prove decisive for Armstrong.

"He stunned the favorites a hit today," said French rider Rich-ard Virenque, who was fourth overall and 6:20 behind Voeckler. Tomorrow, I think he's going to strike a sword blow on this Tour.'

Basso, considered a possible future Tour winner, won a stage for the first time in his career. The 91st TOUR DE ERANCE

What promised to be a second round of raging wind was merely a replica of the first day, with only a fresh breeze off the Firth of Clyde that hardly kept the world's top players from good scores. Levet, who qualified for the British Open by winning last week in Loch Lomond with a final-round 63, made two quick birdies and was the leader for most of the day. He wound up with a 70, his only blemish coming on the 12th when a chip up the slope rolled back to his feet. "You look like an idiot when you

The loudest cheers were for Colin Montgomerie, who grew up at Troop and returned for the first time with low expectations because of personal strife (an impending divorce) and a downtrodden game (No. 71 in the world). Monty is living large in this Open, his round not even ruined by missing a 2-foot par putt on the final hole.

Gibson's 64 tops tight B.C. Open leader board

ENDICOTT, N.Y. - Kelly Gibson completed the soggy first round of the B.C. Open and had just one wish. "I hope a hurricane comes tomorrow and there's a one-round winner," Gibson joked Thursday after an 8-under 64 placed him alone atop the leader board. "Would they do it? Why not? I'll take the cash.

Although showers caused a 28-minute delay on the En-Joie Golf Club course, the first round was completed with Gibson hold ing a one-shot lead over rookie Camilo Villegas, Todd Fischer, John Morgan, last week's runner-up, and Kevin Stadler.

champion Gabriel Hiertstedt were among 11 players at 67, including defending champion Craig Stadler, who couldn't match son Kevin on this day.

The most unlikely name near the top of the leader board was the 22-year-old Villegas, who is playing only his fourth tournament since qualifying for last month's U.S. Open. The native of Colombia began the day with a 29 on the back nines.

Fred Funk, who elected to play here instead of the British Open in an attempt to score more Ryder Cup points, shot 2-over 74.

Nicklaus all but certain to play '05 Open

TROON Scotland - Jack Nicklaus will likely play in the British Open next year at St. Andrews, where the three-time British Open champion captured the 1978 title. "I'm thinking about coming back next year,"

Nicklaus said Friday at Royal Troon. "It will be my last chance to play. Of course, it is at St. Andrews and the R&A paid me a very nice compliment when they adjusted the year from 2006 to 2005. I think it would be a slap in the face if I didn't play. If I'm able, I'll be back."

NORWICH, Vt. - Former PGA Tour player Jeff Julian died Thursday, nearly three years after being diagnosed with ALS. He was 42.

Julian died of complications from amvotrophic lateral sclerosis, known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He played on the PGA Tour in 1996 and 2002. His best finish in 58 starts was a tie for 16th in the 1996 Buick Classic.

Jones relishes long jump win, Athens berth

BY BOB BAUM

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Finally, a moment of triumph for Marion Jones in the U.S. Olympic track and field trials.

U.S. Olympic track and field trials.

Cheered on by a warm, supportive crowd, Jones won the long jump at 23 feet, 4 inches — the second-longest mark in the world this year and her best effort since the 1998 World Cup final in Moscow.

"The first four steps were just as you draw them up," ocach Dan Pfaff said. "She kept her rhythm all the way down the board. It's like a golf shot. She timed it perfectly."

Through the competition, Jones' trademark smile was nowhere to be found. She was expressionless, except for a nod toward the officials after her second and best jump of the night.

Embittered by the cloud of suspicion that she has endured all season, despite her vehement denials that she has ever taken performance-enhancing drugs, Jones again declined to talk to reporters.

But after her final jump, she flashed that smile and bowed to the crowd. Then she hugged runner-up Grace Upshaw and waved to the cheering fans.

On the victory stand, after the medal was placed around her neck, a bit of the old Marion Jones broke through.

"I think I had just a little bit of motivation," she said, laughing so hard her body bent forward. "It feels really good. I had fun out there."

Then she gave a hint of the emotional load she had been carrying after failing to make the team in the 100 meters, then finishing an unimpressive seventh in the long lump qualifying.

"So many people told me, 'Marion have fun.' "she told the crowd. "It was very hard to keep it together today," she said, her voice cracking as she began to sob.

The crowd at Hornet Stadium cheered. She gave high-fives and posed for a few pictures with fans as she made her way out a side entrance, avoiding the post-competition news conference that every other event winner has attended through the meet.

Jones, the long jump bronze medalist in the Sydney Olympics, sent word that she might talk with reporters after she competes in the 200 this weekend.

Later, Jones issued a statement through USA Track & Field.

"I'm very happy with my performance tonight," the statement said. "I'm excited about making my second Olympic team, and look forward to going to Athens."

On the track, the parade of young talent produced another champion, 20-year-old Jeremy Wariner of Baylor in the 400 with a personal-best 44.37, the fastest time in the world this year.

Wariner and fourth-place finisher

Jacobs retires amid doping allegations

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Regina Jacobs, whose long and remarkably successful middle-distance running career ended in disgrace when she flunked a steroid test, formally announced her retirement Thursday.

The announcement in a statement re-

The announcement, in a statement released by her lawyer, came a day before Jacobs planned to begin a bid for her 13th national title in the 1,500 meters and three days before an arbitration hearing is scheduled in her doping case.

Jacobs tested positive for the steroid THG at last year's U.S. championships, at which she won her 12th national title in the 1,500 — her ninth in the last 10 years.

Jacobs is the fifth athlete involved in a doping case to either drop out of the Olympic trials or fail to qualify for the U.S. team for the Athens Games.

Tim Montgomery, Chryste Gaines and Alvin Harrison, all of whom have been charged with steroid use by the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency and face lifetime bans if found guilty by arbitrators, failed to qualify in the Olympic trials.

Michelle Collins, also charged by USADA with steroid use, pulled out of the women's 400 claiming a hamstring injury.

Adam Webb easily advanced through the first round of the 1,500 meters, winning his heat in 3:47.10. Young collegiate rivals Sanya Richards, DeeDee Trotter and Monique Henderson had the three fastest times in the semifinals of the women's 400.

Edwards: Stimulant use was inadvertent

BY BOB BAUM The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif.
Sprinter Torri Edwards, an outspoken supporter of U.S. anti-drug efforts in track and field, is the latest athlete to face a possible suspension for testing positive for a banned substance.
In an interview on Thursday in an interview of fluirsday with representatives of six news organizations, including The Associated Press, Edwards attributed the positive test on a glucose supplement that, unbeknownst to her, contained the stimulant as an additive.

She said she trok the glucose because she wasn't feeling well.

Edwards earned an Olympic berth with a second-place finish in the women's 100 meters at the U.S. Olympic track and field trials, but could be bounced from the team

The reigning world champion at 100 meters, Edwards tested positive for the stimulant nikethamide at a meet in Fort-de-France, Martinique, on April 24, the International Amateur Athletics Federation announced Thursday.

"I've never taken any performance-enhancing drugs. I never will. Never had a need for it," she said. "It's been five long, hard years for me to get to the point where I am today and I would not do anything like this to jeopardize what I've earned over the years."

Edwards' case will be heard Monday by a U.S. arbitration panel in Orange County. Under the World Anti-Doping Agency code, she would face a 2-year ban unless she can persuade the panel that there were sufficient mitigating circumstances to warrant only a warning, said WADA spokesman Frederic Donze.

If the panel rules against her, Edwards said, she would take her case to the international Court of Arbitration for Sport. The CAS finding would be binding.

The glucose was supplied to her by Dr. Christopher Vincent, who purchased it at a local store, Edwards said, adding the container and remainder of the glucose has been presented as evidence in her case.

The substance known as "Coramine Glucose" is sold only in Vietnam and parts of France, according to a statement released by Edwards' agent, Emanuel Hudson.

Edwards and Lewis said there was no need for her to use any performance-enhancing drugs at Martinique because there were no top runners in the race, she had already received an appearance fee and there was no prize money at stake. She said she felt obligated to run because she was the promotional attraction for the meet and took glucose after the first round of the 100.

Vincent, a British chiropractor, found the glucose at a local store, Edwards said. She said that neither coramine nor nikethamide were on the wallet cards of banned substances both she and Vincent carried.

Edwards, who finished second to LaTasha Colander in the 100 final last Saturday, is scheduled to run the 200, with preliminaries beginning Friday.

Wilson, Young make men's gymnastics team

BY NANCY ARMOUR The Associated Press

When Blaine Wilson dropped off the still rings in February, grabbing his torn left biceps, everybody thought his chances for the Athens Olympics were finished.

Everybody, that is, except Wil-

He made good on the vow he made in February on Thursday night, earning one of the final two spots on the U.S. men's gymnastics team. When the men's gymnastics competition begins in Athens on Aug. 13, Wilson will be there — less than six months after his injury.

"I knew right away that I'd be back," he said. "Athens was never out of my mind. It was never a question whether I'd be back. I just needed a little time to get everything together."

Guard Young also won a spot after a two-day selection meet in Colorado Springs, Colo,, completing the team that already included current world and national champion Paul Hamm and twin brother Morgan, Brett McClure and Jason Gatson. The Hamms, McClure and Gatson were chosen at the Olympic trials last month.

Raj Bhavsar and 2000 Olympian Stephen McCain were selected as alternates. Sean Townsend, a former national champion, 2000 Olympian and the world champion on parallel bars in 2001, didn't make the team.

The entire women's team will be chosen Sunday.

Wilson, who turns 30 on Aug. 3, has been the country's pre-eminent gymnast for a decade, winning five straight national titles from 1996-2000 and competing at the 1996 and 2000 Olympics.

He has never won an Olympic medal, though, a gaping hole that's kept him competing long after his peers retired.

He won his first world championships medal last summer when he helped the U.S. men take the silver, and figured to be part of the squad for Athens, where the Americans will be favored to win their first team medal since 1984.

Then came the American Cup on Feb. 28. Wilson was competing on still rings, his best event, when he suddenly dropped to the macleuthing his left arm. His biceps had torn completely off the bone, a devastating injury that normally has a recovery time of 6-to-7 months.

After surgery March 2, Wilson immediately began rehabbing, riding a stationary bike and doing exercises to maintain his core strength. He was back in the gym soon after, and four months after the injury, competed at the Olympic trials.

Air Force players face court-martial

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. — Two Air Force Academy football players accused of using steroids will be court-martialed, the military said.

Junior running back Matthew Ward, charged with wrongful use and possession of the anabolic steroid methandrostenolone, will be court-martialed Aug. 18, the academy said Thursday.

A date has not been set for the court-martial for junior linebacker

Overton Spence Jr. on charges of wrongful use, distribution and possession of methandrostenolone.

Academy Superintendent Lt. Gen. John Rosa Jr. referred both cases to courts-martial earlier this week. Both cadets had waived their right to an Article 32 evidentiary hearing, which is similar to civilian grand jury sessions.

grand Jury sessions.

"After (Rosa) reviewed the evidence in the case and consulted with the Air Force judge advocate, he decided there was enough evidence to take the case forward," academy spokesman Lt. Col. Laurent Fox

If convicted, Ward faces 10 years of confinement while Spence could receive 25 years. Both face dismissal from the Air Force and forfeiture of pay and allowances. The school has begun random testing of cadets and some employees for steroids in what experts say is an unusual step for a college of any kind. Both players have been suspended from the football team.

"This is a military justice proceeding, and we'll deal with whatever the outcome is when it's complete," coach Fisher DeBerry said. "I hurt for our guys that they are going through this, and I'm disappointed about

Military lawyers representing the cadets did not return phone calls.

Two other cadets also face steroids charges. An evidence hearing for Eric Swartz is scheduled for July 28. Rosa is deciding whether a court-martial is in order for Jonathan Belkowitz.

Earlier this week, senior cadet Shane Thomas was convicted of wrongful use and possession of ketamine, an anesthetic for humans and animals. He was also convicted of threatening to hurt a female cadet if she reported his drug use. He faces dismissal from the Air Force but no iail time.

NHL. players union to resume talks

NEW YORK — NHL and players union negotiators will meet Wednesday, the first time they will have talked since May 25.

The NHL's collective bargaining agreement with the NHLPA expires Sept. 15.

"We remain hopeful that our meeting next Wednesday will result in progress being made toward a resolution," said NHL vice president Bill Daly, "Either way, we believe it is now important to begin meeting more regularly because time is getting short, and the only way this can be resolved is if the parties continue to talk."

The league is expected to lock out the players if a new contract is not reached in September. NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman has urged "cost certainty" for the owners and is seeking some form of salary cap which the union vehemently opposes.

Bettman and Bob Goodenow, executive director of the NHLPA, will attend Wednesday's meeting.

Blue Jays want Delgado to waive no-trade clause

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays plan to ask slugger Carlos Delgado to waive his no-trade clause.

"I'm going to him ask if he wants to, but he has the right to decide whether he wants to or he doesn't," Blue Jays General Manager J.P. Ricciardi said Friday.

Delgado, eligible for free agency this fall, earns $18.5 million this season in the final year of a four-year, $64 million deal.

Ricciardi said the team will probably have a payroll of $50 million next season, the same as this season. He would like to use the money Delgado makes on a number of players.

"I think Carlos understands it," Ricciardi said. "He's a very, very bright guy. Bringing him back at $18.5 million dollars is something that's not going to happen. That doesn't mean we don't want to bring him

Ricciardi declined to say when he would speak to Delgado.

Delgado was second in AL MVP voting last year after hitting .302 with 42 homers and a major league-leading 145 RBIs.

He entered Friday night's game against Texas batting .223 with 10 home runs and 33 RBIs. Delgado was activated from the disabled list on July 6 after missing 33 games with a strained rib cage.

Danton pleads guilty in plot to kill agent

The Associated Press

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. — Former St. Louis Blues player Mike Danton admitted Friday that he sought to have his agent killed as part of a plot that unraveled when the would-be hit man turned out to be a police informant.

Danton pleaded guilty to a federal murder-for-hire conspiracy charge and could face seven to 10 years in prison when he is sentenced Oct. 22.

Danton was to have been tried in September with co-defendant Katie Wolfmeyer, and was scheduled for a pretrial hearing next week. Danton, 23, and Wolfmeyer, a 19-year-old college student from a St.

Giles returns with hot bat as Atlanta beats Montreal

- Marcus Giles picked up right where he left off — in the majors, that is.

Giles hit two doubles in his first game in two months and Jaret Wright (7-5) won his fifth straight decision, leading the Atlanta Braves past the Montreal Expos 8-0 on Thursday night and into a tie for first place with Philadelphia in the NL East. Giles was hitting .339 when he was injured, and his average went up to .341 after Thursday night. "It was a long time to be out," he said. "It's sore, but my shoulder won't be an excuse for me for any part of this year. It's healed enough to do what I did

TROON, Scotland - A memorable week in the British Open turned surreal for Skip Kendall. He started it by bringing his mother to Britain to celebrate her 80th birthday. Then he had his first brush with royalty, shaking hands with Prince Andrew behind the 11th green at Royal Troon. The real fun came Friday when Kendall, 0-for-310 in 10 seasons on the PGA Tour, holed out from a pot bunker for birdie and rolled in a 50-foot eagle putt for a 5-under 66 and one-shot lead over Thomas Levet of France

What more could a guy want? A claret jug wouldn't be bad.

"I really feel like I can win out on the PGA Tour, as well as any place else," Kendall said. "I think it's just a matter of time. Hopefully, this will be mine.'

Kendall is playing in only his third British Open and 14th major championship, but he has ize what awaits on the weekend at Royal Troon. And if playing in the final group isn't daunting enough. he needs only to glance over his shoulder to see a cast of challeng-

Phil Mickelson, above, tied Skip

Kendall for Friday's lowest round.

shots back, along with former Masters champion Mike Weir. "We've put ourselves in contention," Els said. "Let's see what happens." Tiger Woods was six back, keeping alive his hopes of ending an 0-for-8 drought in the majors. "I'm right there with a chance," he said after a 71.

Everyone is chasing a 39-year-old journeyman who used to wait tables at an Olive Garden in Florida and hit balls in a grassy field — still wearing his black trousers, white shirt and bow tie — between the lunch and dinner shifts. Kendall is scrappy pounds and full of self-belief. When he sat down for his interview and noticed some names scribbled on the veneer table, he figured he was supposed to sign it, too. But a Royal & Ancient official politely told him that it was only for British Open champions. and he would have to wait until Sunday night.
